TRAIL SIGNS

Will you choose the green trail, of landscapes, colours and scents? The white trail, of flavours, ocean and terroir? The blue trail, of water activities, waves and breeze? The yellow trail, of heritage, architecture and typical houses? The pink trail, of moments of conviviality, family and friends? The starlit trail, of great moments, shows and sound? Will you prefer going off-trail and discovering the secrets of the Gois? Or quite simply following the bike trails? This year, it's to Noirmoutier Island that you must go on a Tour... A trail Tour!

TASTE AND FLAVOURS

Noirmoutier Island abounds with excellent products which, whether from the land or the sea, have very little distance to go before reaching your plate...

It's an island full of flavours which has succeeded in making the land and the ocean meet. Cupped oysters renowned for the delicacy of their flesh and their meaty aspect, salt harvested by hand, fish, shellfish and crustaceans caught very close to the coast or on the foreshore, famous early potatoes... The Noirmoutier terroir has made the right choice of focusing on quality. The two oyster-farming areas, one in Bourgneuf Bay, in the harbour of Le Bonhomme, and the other on the Atlantic side, produce 800 to 1,000 tons of cupped oysters every year. Having grown in the open sea or matured in fattening ponds, they will have more or less iodised flavours. From the ocean, the island draws other very noble resources. From the harbour of L'Herbaudière, the Noirmoutier fishing fleet departs daily in search of shrimp, lobster, crab, spider crab, pollock, sea bass and gilthead sea bream, but also sole, hake and monkfish.

"When we started out, eighteen years ago, we had to make customers come to us while imposing our style: cooking terroir produce only. It will never be possible to export my work to another region. Indeed, the Erika oyster dish we're offering has a history that would make no sense elsewhere. I cook what I find in the morning at the fish auction market and every day is different. True luxury consists in having all quality produce at hand and in this respect we're spoiled."

But it's above all a little early potato, the famous Bonnotte, that carries the island's colours far afield. Indeed, its production follows quite a ritual. Planted at Candlemas in sandy soil covered with a bed of wrack, it is harvested 90 days later, on the first Saturday of May. Grown solely in Noirmoutier and in small quantity, it accounts for only 100 tons out of the 13,000 tons of potatoes produced on the island. Close to the agricultural plain, the salterns are another local pride. As soon as the sun warms up the clay of the salt pans and the eastern wind blows, the salt makers repeat ancestral gestures to extract the white gold from the pans. Unwashed and untreated, cooking salt and fleur de sel salt are naturally rich in mineral salts and trace elements. Noirmoutier Island is yours for the tasting as much as it is for the visiting...

TERROIR PRODUCE

TILE NUANCES...

Subtle differences emerge in the materials. Granite in the north of the island, limestone in the south. While bourgeois houses preferred slate, tiles generally testify to a certain hierarchy of usage. Indeed, in the 19th century, the Noirmoutier salt left for Bordeaux and the boats returned loaded with tiles. Long tiles, different in colour and quality from the region's small red tiles that came from the mainland and were often reserved for outbuildings. In Barbâtre, to the south of the island, you're closer to the mainland. The style of the houses, nestled under the dune, is probably somewhat different. The same goes for the amazing villas in Bois de la Chaise, built at the end of the 19th century, often according to a model plan. On Noirmoutier Island, each village is known for having its own atmosphere. And the built environment always has something to do with it.

An architecture on Noimoutier Island? Rather architectures! They reflect the history, the trades, the traditions... Atmospheres.

It's an island with simple and popular architecture. As often, it has been shaped by local landscapes and materials, according to the constraints of daily life. And chiefly, to professional constraints! In Noirmoutier-en-L'Île, the fine bourgeois homes of merchants and craftsmen are sprawling. Unlike those of the ocean-going seafarers, often gone... In the Banzeau District, huddled up against each other, they form a compact community. They are much different from the fishermen's dwellings, around L'Herbaudière. The latter needed space to dry and mend nets. Their long low houses with colourful shutters are set on the dune, at a good distance from each other. And so are the peasant houses with their characteristic silhouettes and outside stairs.

RETIRED ARCHITECT

"I have been living in Noirmoutier Island since... 1740! It's at that time that my fami*ly arrived. I worked with my father and my grandfather who were contractors, before* I became an architect. I was able to use the traditional 17th-century and 18th-century dwellings as references for the houses I built for forty years. My favourite place on the island? Probably the hamlet of Le Vieil... The plots of land are small, the buildings are modest, and the seaside villas have blended in with the village."

NATURALLY BEAUTIFUL

Combining long beaches and intimate coves, salterns and forests of rare tree species, Noirmoutier Island is a little paradise, charming and preserved, especially prized by birds.

It's an island where, in every season, the scents of land and sea and the intensity of their colours merge and intertwine. Inevitably, on this piece of land surrounded by Bourgneuf Bay on one side and by the Atlantic on the other, the ocean is never very far! As in Barbâtre, to the south, where the wind makes the sea spray travel to the forest of maritime pines. In return, it carries away to the open sea the saffron scent of immortelle, this little plant of the dunes that tickles the nostrils of sailors. From the bridge to the harbour of Le Morin in L'Epine, an endless beach of golden sand, lined with woods and dunes, unfolds insolently. Renowned for its magnificent coastal forests looking onto the sea, Noirmoutier has a well-kept little secret: in Les Eloux Wood, an undulating dune massif planted with pines, the highest point of the island, peaking at 22 metres, is hiding..

VARIETY IN LANDSCAPES

At the back of the barrier beach, the salterns rule. Pleasing to the eye and of infinite poetry, these harmoniously geometric landscapes unveil their treasures in the summer months when the sun and wind are in tune. Shaped by men, this very rich environment also accommodates many birds finding salutary rest there. Change of scenery in Bourgneuf Bay. Sheltered from the winds, the coast unwinds a string of intimate coves interspersed with rocks and elegant beaches, such as Les Souzeaux Beach, L'Anse-Rouge Beach and Les Dames Beach, in the shade of the Bois de la Chaise wood. Rich with fifteen or so Mediterranean plant species, with mimosa trees and holm oaks, the latter partly hides from sight the amazing seaside chalets built at the beginning of the past century...

JOURNALIST, PAINTER AND PHOTOGRAPHER

"I have a very strong contact with Nature. This may be why I feel in balance on Noirmoutier Island. Here, there's a serenity and an intensity that I feel deeply. I often go in the salterns, to the Sebastopol polder or to the harbour of Le Bonhomme to make sketches and black and white photographs. I love especially the pied avocet, with its recurved beak, and the little egret for their lightness."

BLUE TRAIL

Water activities

SALT WATER STORIES...

When it comes to water activities, Noirmoutier becomes fully insular again. Here, the ocean, the wind, the shore use their charms and make all water activities enthusiasts happy.

It's an island... It's first and foremost an island! In Bourgneuf Bay or facing the Atlantic, depending on the weather's moods, there's always an area to suit what you feel like doing and befitting your abilities. You can even choose your postcard: the beach huts of Les Sableaux Beach, the landing stage of Les Dames Beach, the magic of the Gois, the dune and maritime pines of the south point, the windmills of La Court Beach, the bay of Luzeronde, the rocks of La Madeleine... The mild surroundings are, of course, conducive to the practice of fine yachting. This strong Noirmoutier tradition is maintained every year with two major summer events: the Bois de la Chaise Regattas and the Noirmoutier Classic. The former are the festive and popular gathering of traditional sailing boats, the latter brings together classic yachts, Shark yachts, Dragon yachts, metric yachts, Harlé design yachts..

"On Noirmoutier Island, I mainly sail leeward, in Bourgneuf Bay. It's a sheltered stretch of water where you can practise comfortable, gentlemanly navigation. The currents, substantial tides, changing winds when rounding headlands are part of the game and create real excitement during a regatta, especially when you sail up close to rocks, sandbanks or oyster beds... And then, you have the magnificent landscapes, Les Souzeaux, Les Dames, La Clère, all these coves... It never changes and it's a real pleasure!"

But the more modern sailing boats, the motor boats, catamarans, sailing dinghies, boards also find nice playgrounds around the island. Kitesurfing boards too, which have here one of the Atlantic Coast's most famous spots: launching your sail a few cable lengths from the Gois is a rare moment! Sometimes, nautical pleasure takes guieter forms. The exceptional coastline between L'Herbaudière and Noirmoutier-en-L'Île may serve as a setting for pleasant kayaking or standup paddleboarding excursions, and so does the Atlantic coast in a different register. While shellfishing enthusiasts will find what they're looking for in the coves and rocks, and around the Gois at low tide. It's also possible to go and explore seabeds or to take advantage of the long beach in Barbâtre to do sand yachting... On Noirmoutier Island, the wind and salt water are never very far!

THE ANSWER IS IN THE WIND

PARADISE FOR LITTLE ONES AND GROWNUPS

Noirmoutier Island should be enjoyed with family and allows to taste the happiness of outdoor life.

It's an island of all pleasures for families and children. A paradise where, at any age, you can enjoy the open air, watch nature and awaken to its riches. An island, too, that gives a taste for the ocean. With its vast beaches conducive to learning sailing, it is the place where passions and callings are born. Four clubs offer kids many activities such as treasure hunts, water games and fishing parties. You can make friends there, sometimes for life... But it's also with family that you can make your most memorable discoveries. One has lost count of the little shipmates who learned navigation while doing tacks off Barbâtre or in quiet Bourgneuf Bay in the company of their parents and grandparents. Or of all those who learned to feel where the wind comes from to catch shrimps, especially at Les Dames Beach or at L'Epine, to flush out crabs from under the rocks in La Guérinière, or also to scratch the foreshore and gather clams and winkles in Le Vieil.

SIMPLE PLEASURES

In summer, the beach is the greatest playground: the younger ones learn to swim or to improve their breaststroke under the eye and encouragement of their elders, they play in the sand and they build ephemeral castles. They also gather new shells that will enrich the collections started the previous summer. On the Bourgneuf Bay side, on the long seawall protecting the island from the onslaughts of the ocean, outings on foot or by bike get joyful and invigorating, and adopt a slow pace conducive to contemplation. A mill for happy memories, Noirmoutier Island is to be fully shared and experienced with family.

A YOUNG AND HAPPY GRANDMOTHER

"Noirmoutier Island has huge potential to make holidays with grandchildren ge very well. Off season, when we have the island almost all to ourselves, we enjoy a lot making long strolls on the beach and in Les Eloux Wood. Actually, things have not changed much, as I'm repeating with my grandchildren what I liked doing with my grandparents."

Naturally born of an accumulation of sand, silt and alluvium under the effect of contrary currents, the Gois was reinforced by men in the 19th century. Today, it is as much a monument as a landscape. In the Gois, as rarely elsewhere, the show-in intimate connection with the rhythm of nature-is permanent. At the first streak of dawn or at nightfall, at flood tide or at ebb tide, under a mackerel sky or a bright sun, it assumes very different expressions. And when the sea starts its grand return and regains possession of the premises, it is merely a diffuse memory. Only the man platforms of the refuge beacons punctuating its course, and whose usefulness is sometimes verified, then suggest its presence. The Gois is definitely not a site like the others. And Noirmoutier is not an island like the others...

UNIQUE AND MAGICAL

Twice a day, under the influence of the tide, the Gois Passage unveils itself to link the mainland with Noirmoutier Island.

It is an island whose access is quite peculiar... In the crevices of the causeway, a few puddles of water still linger between two cobblestones. Their silver reflections sparkle under the scorching sun and impart magnetic character to this world-unique landscape. Even when it offers itself to the gaze in its entirety, the Gois-a thin thread between the mainland and Noirmoutier Island-keeps all its mystery. Probably because it speaks to the imagination and carries in itself the secret of an in-between... Not yet land, no longer really sea. Its crossing is also a journey in its own right which often looks like an initiatory ritual. But for the time being, it is a stage where starving birds and shellfish gatherers compete for a feast of shellfish. On either side of the 4.150 kilometres of the causeway, a generous bed of cockles and clams is indeed much coveted.

CHANGING LANDSCAPES

A LISTED HERITAGE SITE

On November 2, 2017, the Gois was listed under the legislation on national heritage sites by a decree of the Council of State. This recognition will result in the setting up of a new territorial project that will aim at protecting the landscape and biodiversity, and at developing the site for visitors while respecting traditional activities-fishing, oyster farming, mussel farming, agriculture... This listing also enables the Gois to become eligible for the Great Site of France label and stands as a major step toward its listing as a Unesco World Heritage site.

AN ABUNDANT PROGRAMME

HIGHLIGHTS

For all and everywhere! Sport, music, dance, theatre, literature... All the year round, Noirmoutier Island is bursting with ideas and offers.

It's an island full of life! And this is reflected in its activity programme: an abundant offering that can appeal to kids and grownups in extremely diversified fields... You have first the moments of conviviality for sharing. The Noirmoutier harbour (early May) or oyster farming at the harbour of Le Bonhomme (late July) have thus been celebrated for a long time. The farmers welcome enthusiasts and share good moments during the Bonnotte Fête (early May). As for L'Epine, every two years it perpetuates the Flower Fête tradition (late June) with a parade of floats and brass bands before the funfair. One month earlier, around Les Perles Pond, still in L'Epine, nature is celebrated (late May) with a series of activities dedicated to biodiversity.

It's impossible not to mention the Sailing Week (early August) featuring the Noirmoutier Classic and the Bois de la Chaise Regattas. In late April, the March Around the Island combines sport and conviviality with two days of hiking punctuated with a very nice evening. Finally, as regards culture, Noirmoutier Island offers today a great number of gatherings. For a start, you have the Noirmoutier Theatre Festival (mid-August), created 25 years ago. Its shows in the castle yard and in the Salorges Centre [former salt warehouse] made its fame, but the festival also makes it a point of honour to move into other venues in La Guérinière, L'Épine and Barbâtre. In its wake, other events were born, such as the Crazy Night, relaying La Folle Journée in Nantes (mid-May), the Déferlante de Printemps [Spring Breaker], a series of street shows in Noirmoutier-en-L'Île and Barbâtre (late May), Rue Marmaille, street theatre performances for young audiences in Barbâtre (in June), or the Sea Book Fair in Noirmoutier-en-l'Île (with the Harbour Fête). You never have time to get bored on Noirmoutier Island!

THEATRE FESTIVAL

"I have had a real attachment to this island since my childhood and I was able to materialise it by creating the Theatre Festival. I used to dream about these venues and I'm still trying to have new ones discovered. It's interesting to see how each stage director uses the castle yard and brings it to life. Over time, I was witness to the birth of a highly diversified cultural calendar on the island. The Salorges season programming, featuring season tickets, shows that live performance has a future here and it's just as well."

TRAILS

Cycling is probably the best means of discovering all facets of Noirmoutier Island.

This is an island where time stops... To fully take the measure of this, you have to adopt a different pace, the pace of the bike for instance. With it, you can get somewhat away from the beaches and get to know heritage, nature, history. As seasons go by, you encounter migratory birds, you witness the flowering of mustard, you see the heaps of salt grow... New viewpoints are revealed onto the nature reserve from the jetty, onto the bay from the seawall... You can also get up very close to the men who make the island's heart beat: the salt makers, the fishermen, the oyster farmers, the farmers... And you can share moments of serenity, with family or friends, without fear for child safety.

CYCLING CHAMPION

"For me, Noirmoutier Island means the holidays, good times, family, friends... When I trained, I used to reach the bridge through the small roads and I always came back via the Gois... Here, it's great for strolls with family. Actually, there's no spot I don't like! Even in high season, you always have the feeling that you're far from the crush and getting plenty of fresh air... For the start of the Tour de France this summer, the racing cyclists will be too focused to enjoy the landscape... But it will certainly give them the desire to come back..."

Cycling is deeply rooted among the island inhabitants: for them, it's almost a familiar historic emblem that they readily use. The old bike in the back of the garage is a daily life tool. And so cyclists will feel quite at home... And those who have no bike will find one to hire, everywhere on the island, mountain bikes, tandem bikes, cargo bikes, and even, of course, electric bikes. For, while the ground is flat-the island's highest point does not exceed 22 metres!-, sometimes the mischievous wind puts the cyclists' calves to the test. To make the most of it, the cyclistfriendly routes, mostly with separate lanes, provide an interesting solution: 19 km to cover in the north between beaches and harbours, 23 km between salterns and windmills in the centre, and 23 km between Gois and forest in the south. A bike is all it takes for Noirmoutier Island to be handed to you on a plate...
